

ABSTRACT

A contact lens is provided including a lens body and an image component effective in producing a color shifting appearance of the contact lens. For example, the image component may include a light diffracting component made up of flakes of a multilayered interference film suspended in a polymeric medium.